The German War Question—Austrian hatred toward Prussia.

[From the Frankfort Kritik.]

Prussia has no raison d'etre beyond the dynastic interests of the house of Hohenzollern, and it is a matter of perfect indifference to Europe and to the balance of power whether there continues to exist a State like Prussia, or whether three or four smaller States take its place on the political map of Europe. If you want to secure peace and quiet for Germany, knock Prussia on the head and partition her territories among deserving claimants. Let Austria have Silesia in exchange for Venetia; restore to Saxony the provinces taken from her to be given to Prussia by the Vienna Congress of 1815; form the Rhenish Province and Westphalia into a new State, to be placed under the rule of the house of Coburg, which now occupies the Belgian throne; let Hanover and Hesse Cassel also have a suitable portion of the spoil; let France take the French part of Belgium, and restore the remainder to Holland, which would then enter the German Confederation; let the Hohenzollerns return what will remain after this partition—say a territory with a population of some four or five millions. But as this population consists principally of German and Sclaves, it will be wise to garrison the March of Brandenburg for the space of some twenty years with German troops—such as Austrian chasseurs, Bavarian cuirassiers and light horse, Wurtemburg lancers and Hessian Infantry, so that the race of the people in these parts may be improved by crossing, and a new and less objectionable generation may take the place of the present inhabitants of that land.

THE ANNIHILATION OF PRUSSIA DEMANDED.

[From the Frankfort Journal.]

We shall never be in repose as long as Austria and Prussia are equal in force. The interests of Germany therefore demand imperiously the destruction of one of these great powers. Then comes the question which of the two should be sacrificed. Austria is a political necessity for Germany and for Europe, while the existence of Prussia has no other motive than the dynastic interests of the family of Hohenzollern. To Europe, at present, it is a matter of utter indifference whether Prussia should be replaced or not by three or four States of secondary rank, as the political equilibrium would in nowise be disturbed. If Prussia should disappear from the map of Europe, not the least hiatus would be perceived nor the smallest interest be injuriously affected. When, therefore, the question arises as to which of the two great German powers should be effaced from the map of Europe, the interest of Germany incontestibly indicates Prussia, and demands her annihilation. From that would result the following combinations: Austria would be recompensed for the loss of Venetia by Silesia, Saxony would recover the territories which were taken away from her by the Congress of Vienna; the Rhenish Provinces and Westphalia would form a new secondary State under the government of the Coburgs of Belgium; Hanover and Electoral Hesse would be enlarged at the expense of Prussia, the French Provinces would go to France, and the Dutch to Holland, who would enter with them into the Germanic Confederation. The family of Hohenzollern would preserve a territory of from four to five millions of inhabitants, which should be occupied for twenty years by the troops of Austria, Bavaria, Hesse and Wurtemburg, in order that entirely new generation might be formed there.

THE AUSTRIAN ARMIES.

According to a Vienna letter in the Paris Patrie, the Aulic Council at its last sitting decided that the forces under arms in Austria should be divided into two large active armies, one to be called the army of the North, destined to operate in Germany, and the other of the South, to be devoted to the defense of the lower provinces of the empire. That of the North is divided into three corps of 120,000 men each, the first two at present occupying Bohemia and Moravia, and the third in course of formation in Southern Austria. At the same time a reserve is being organized which will be successively carried to 200,000 men, and which will take, when it reaches that number, the denomination of the Army of Reserve.

The correspondent of a Paris journal, writing from Vienna, adds some further information. He adds:

"The great army of the North under Marshal Benedek, which is to have its headquarters at Pardubitz, will comprise an effective of 350,000 men and 800 guns. The army of Italy already consists of 130,000 men, of which 80,000 or 90,000 are destined to take the field, and the remainder to garrison the fortresses. Beside those two armies, which nearly amount to 510,000 men, the reserve is being organized, besides bodies of volunteers in the provinces, so that, in case of need Austria can have 800,000 combatants at her disposal. The Archduke Leopold, who is chief of a body of engineers, has, I hear, been appointed to the command of a corps d'armee. The Archduke William, who is the head of the artillery, is to proceed this week to Bohemia. Prince Alexander of Hesse, Marshal in the Austrian army, and who greatly distinguished himself in the Italian campaign of 1859, has been appointed commander of the Federal contingent. The Northern Railway Company, on the 15th, posted up bills announcing that from the next day there would be only one train each way daily between the city of Prague and Pesth. The Whitsuntide excursion trains are necessarily suppressed on both the Northern and State railways. I have just learned that on the Northern line alone twenty eight trains will leave daily from to-morrow, and that each will carry a battalion or squadron of troops. At the same time that these formidable masses are being concentrated in Bohemia, the Government, as I have been assured, has resolved to fortify with all expedition that part of Vienna, beginning at Dreamberg and following the course of the Danube. M. Drasche has engaged to supply 40,000,000 of bricks in six weeks; 20,000 men will be occupied day and night on these works, the cost of which is estimated at 5,000,000 of florins (2fr 50c each). Voluntary subscriptions are flowing in—the total received up to this morning was 30,000 florins. All, or nearly all, the military appointments hitherto made concern more especially the army of the North. That of Italy is completely organized—the defensive works at Venice and along the coast are in active progress. A general belief prevails in military circles that if hostilities occur in Italy they will not begin on the Mincio or any other point of Austrian Lombardy. It is thought Garibaldi, remembering his past adventures as a soldier and sailor, will enter the Adriatic with a flotilla of the Italian navy and land his volunteers on the Austrian coast. Some accident or other, such as a chance shot fired by a Garibaldian on the first patrol encountered, will, perhaps, be the commencement of the war in Italy on the very day when Count Bismarck, who may possibly be aware of the shot fired at an appointed time and place, will send King William's soldiers across the Saxon frontier."

FOLLY OF A NEW PARTY MOVEMENT.—Speaking of the new party movement, the New York Commercial Advertiser forcibly remarks:

It is an error to suppose that political parties can be manufactured to order; that the personal magnetism or popularity of one man can effect a revolution in and overthrow of an existing organization and build a new one on its ruins. A few politicians may meet together in conclave, draw up resolutions and lay down a platform and creed but they cannot by so doing create a party. There must be some principle at stake, some living, vital issue, some question of right and wrong presented which appeals to the hearts and consciences of the people before they can be revolutionized, or taken away from old affinities and crystalized in a new organization. The masses endowed with reasoning faculties, holding honest convictions and cherishing strong party ties and affiliations cannot be led hither and thither by this or that politician, who may be forming new combinations for the sole purpose of securing the loaves and fishes. It is true they may for a brief period be carried away by popular enthusiasm and swayed into the approval and adoption of such and such a policy, but upon discovering that no principle or a false one is involved they will quickly fall away, leaving the would be leaders without support.

The Call's New York correspondent says a company has been organized in that city to build a gigantic hotel at the entrance of Central Park. It is to cover a whole block, to be seven stories—210x420 feet—and will contain 175 private parlors and 100 rooms. The object of the company is to eclipse all the hotels in the world.

JOHNSON AND THE STATE SUICIDE.—Andrew Johnson, says the Sacramento Union, enjoys the distinction once accorded to Edmund Burke, of furnishing a political creed to each of two hostile parties. After all the abuse lavished upon Chas. Sumner and Thaddeus Stevens for inventing the doctrine of State suicide, it turns out that Andrew Johnson has the original patent for that device. In the speech against secession delivered in the Senate in December, 1860, the present President affirmed that the States which seceded would relapse into their original condition as Territories or Provinces, and entered into the following argument to sustain that position:

But, sir, there is another question that suggests itself in this connection. Kansas, during the last Congress applied for admission into the Union. She assumed to be a State, and the difficulty in the way was a provision in her Constitution and the manner of its adoption. We did not let Kansas in. We did not question her being a State but on account of the manner of forming her Constitution and its provisions we kept Kansas out. What is Kansas now? Is she a State or is she a Territory? Does she revert back to her territorial condition of pupilage? Or, having been a State and having applied for admission, and been refused, is she standing out a State? You hold her as a Territory; you hold her as a province. You prescribe the mode of electing members of her Legislature, and pay them out of their own Treasury. Yes, she is a province, controlled by Federal authority, and her laws are made in conformity with the acts of Congress. Is she not a Territory? I think she is.

Suppose the State of California withdraws from the Union. We admitted her. She was territory acquired by the United States, by our blood and treasure. Now, suppose she withdraws from the confederacy, does she pass back into a Territorial condition, remain a dependency on the Federal Government, or does she stand out as a separate Government? Let me take Louisiana, for which we paid $15,000,000. That was a Territory for a number of years—yes, a province. It is only another name for a province. It is a possession held under the jurisdiction of the United States. We admitted Louisiana into the Union as a State. Suppose we had refused to admit her, would she not still have remained a Territory? Would she not have remained under the protection of the United States? But now, if she has the power to withdraw from the Union, does she not pass back into the condition in which she was before we admitted her into the Union? In what condition does she place herself? When those States which were at first Territories cease their connection with this Government, do they pass back into the Territorial condition? When Florida is going out, when Louisiana is going out, and these other States, that were originally Territories, go out of the Union, in what condition do they place themselves? Are they Territories or are they States? Are they merely on probation to become members of this Confederacy, or are they States outside of the Confederacy.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT IN THE SENATE.—A Washington dispatch of June 8th says:

The Senate spent most of the day on the proposed constitutional amendment, speeches of considerable length being made by Johnson, McDougal, Henderson and Yates, the two gentlemen first named speaking against, and the others in its favor. Johnson particularly argued against the second section. McDougall talked in his usual fashion about matters and things in general, including Maximilian, Fenianism and the negro. Henderson and Yates concurred in saying that the amendment did not go far enough; that it ought to be used on impartial suffrage.

Yates said Doolittle's comparison of himself to Christ would have seemed less blasphemous if he had sacrificed himself in his struggling for the liberation of the blacks from political inequality, instead of the effort to prevent such liberation. The close of the debate was followed by numerous propositions for the amendment of the various sections, most of which were rejected by a vote of three to one. The proceedings were noisy, but without special excitement. Finally, at a quarter past five, a vote on the passage of the joint resolution was called. The attendance during the day was not large, and at the close there was not over two hundred persons in the galleries. The House had adjourned, and about twenty members were on the floor of the Senate. Pomeroy was acting as presiding officer. The vote stood—ayes, 33, noes, 11, the affirmative being exactly three fourths. The ayes were: Anthony, Chandler, Clark, Conness, Cragin, Cresswell, Edmunds, Henderson, Howard, Howe, Kirkwood, Lane of Indiana, Lane of Kansas, Morgan, Morrill, Nye, Poland, Pomeroy, Ramsey, Sherman, Sprague, Stewart, Sumner, Trumbull, Wade, Willey, Williams, Wilson and Yates.

The noes were Cowan, Davis, Doolittle, Guthrie, Hendricks, Johnson, McDougall, Norton, Riddle, Saulsbury and Van Winkle.

The absentees were Brown, Buckalew, Dixon, Nesmith and Wright, of whom the last four named would have probably voted in the negative had they been present. This would have made the vote 33 to 15. The vote of Van Winkle in the negative excited some surprise in the galleries, as the impression had got abroad that he would support the proposition. His chief objections are to the third section. The amendment will be agreed to in its present form by the House without debate probably. An examination of it will show that it differs in several respects from that agreed to by the Union Senatorial caucus. These differences, however, are of phraseology rather than of ideas.

A FEMALE SOLDIER.—While a working party was engaged a few days ago in disinterring the Federal dead who fell in the battle of Resaca, near Atlanta, they discovered a body which excited attention from the smallness of the feet. On examination it was found to be that of a woman who had been killed by a bullet through the head. The grave was marked "Charles Johnson, private, sixth Missouri Volunteers."

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE

TUESDAY MORNING, JULY 10, 1866

Frauds and Who Perpetrated Them.

Charges of frauds in the late elections have been very freely bandied by the Copperhead newspapers and it seems that a few simple minded Confederates in various parts of the State have repeated and rehashed the charges till they begin to believe them true. So far as we have been able to learn, such charges are mostly baseless, or may be laid with equal truth at the doors of the Democracy. No cases of intentional fraud perpetrated by Union men have yet been established, and very nearly every case as yet mentioned, has proven, upon investigation, to have been unfounded. Several papers, for instance, gave publicity, to a statement that several precincts in Marion county voted by ballot. This was totally untrue. The voting there was, in every precinct, viva voce. It has been charged that in Yamhill, the clerks set down Democratic votes for the Union candidates; but in every case where the name of such voter has been instanced, it has been found that the vote was correctly tallied. In the Portland case, if the keeping of the polls open after dark was a fraud (of which there may be a reasonable doubt in view of decisions in similar cases), it was unintentional fraud, the judges believing it to be lawful and their duty to keep the polls thus open. It was not done clandestinely nor with any apparent intent to take an advantage of anybody. Democrats as well as Union men, voted after dark. The intent seems to have been to honestly afford all an opportunity to vote. There have been decisions sustaining the legality of exactly such proceedings. Since the contest began in Polk county, it has been found that the relative proportion of fraudulent votes makes a considerable showing against the Democracy and that if all fraudulent votes be thrown out, very nearly all the Union candidates will be found to be elected.

We believe fully, from all the evidence before us, that similar results would be reached upon an investigation, in several counties. In Wasco, it is stated upon good authority that, the Democrats voted a number of Kanakas and Indians contrary to law. In Union and Umatilla, persons from Washington Territory, British Columbia and Idaho—having no more a residence in Oregon than Hottentots—voted the Democratic tickets. If Democrats want an investigation of the frauds in those counties, we are quite sure the Union men will meet them more than half way and welcome them to the contest.

That irregularities, informalities and improper voting—not properly designated as frauds, except in the technical construction of law—be shown in many places, we have no doubt, but that there have been any more of such proceedings than occur at every election, or that they are chargeable to Union men more than to Democrats, we do not believe, nor is there any evidence that such are the facts—except in the cases we have mentioned, and these cases are certainly against the Democracy.

It is an easy matter for reckless men to publish false statements and quite as easy for fools to believe them. The Democratic newspapers have very freely and very recklessly published wholesale charges of frauds, and quite a number of butternut copperheads have blatantly repeated them and affected to believe them, all unsupported as they are by truthful evidence. We are informed that, in various parts of the State, the true-blue Confederates are blowing and swearing in regular guerrilla-bushwhacking-chivalry style that they will not submit to the inauguration of Governor Woods; that but for counting fraudulent votes, Kelly would have been elected and Kelly they will have for Governor or they will have a fight. These are mostly simple minded ignoramuses who have been fired to their present quarrelsome pitch by the intemperate language of the copperhead newspapers and leaders.

All we have to say about the matter is that whomsoever the canvass by the Legislature shows to have been elected, will be inducted into office. Threats are as idle as the wind, and those who use them only show their asininity.

Prevention of Smuggling.

On the 15th of May the Senate had under consideration an act intended to alter in some respects the several statutes bearing upon the question of smuggling, which have been enacted from the year 1791 down to the present time. The changes made in the law are not very radical, but are such as are intended to apply chiefly to the northern and northwestern frontiers, and such as are suggested by the relations which have sprung up within the past few years between the British provinces and our own country. But it occurs to us that the law as amended is not yet stringent enough. The committee had reported an amendment to the act of 1799 providing that when goods were seized for violation of law and the vessel libeled for smuggling, the onus probandi should lie on the defendant, or in other words that the defendant or ship-master should be held responsible unless he could show that he was ignorant of the act of smuggling and was therefore innocent. This amendment to the old law as it came from the committee, was strongly opposed in the Senate, and finally lost. In lieu of it, however, it was enacted that "in cases of seizure, the onus probandi shall lie upon the claimant where probable cause is shown for the prosecution." Senator Williams contended for the principle that the master of the vessel should be held accountable unless he could show that he had exercised due diligence and that he could not know that the smuggled goods were on board his ship. He stated the case thus:

> Upon the northwestern frontier it is customary for persons to go on board vessels at Victoria and come around to Portland with trunks and packages, and to violate the revenue laws in that way; and when a prosecution is commenced against the master of the vessel, although the fact of the importation contrary to law is established as a general rule the defense that he makes is that he was ignorant of the fact that the goods were brought upon his vessel, or that they were brought into the port of Portland contrary to law. Now, if the law be that the fact that he has imported those goods in violation of the law is probable cause of prosecution, and he understands it to be the law, then it will make him diligent, and when goods are brought on board his vessel he will see to it that they are goods that can be transported or on which the duties are paid, and that they are not brought into the ports of the United States contrary to law.
> In that respect I think this provision will be of advantage. It will make it necessary for masters and those who have the management of ships to be more diligent to prevent smuggling. Trunks of opium, for instance, are taken on ships at Victoria and brought to Portland. When the master of the vessel is prosecuted for smuggling, the fact that a trunk filled with opium has been brought from a British port to an American port contrary to law is undeniable but the master undertakes to defend himself upon the ground that he was ignorant that he did not know that there were such goods on board his vessel, and if he is attentive to his duties he may successfully make that defense, but if, when the fact is established that he has imported those goods contrary to law, he is then compelled to show that he did not know that the goods were on board the ship, it seems to me that he will be more diligent and take more pains to see that the laws of the country are maintained in this respect.

In view of the repeated violations of the law in regard to smuggling that occur in the district of Oregon, (and doubtless they are of as frequent occurrence elsewhere on the frontier), we should have been glad to have had an act as stringent in its provisions and penalties as that contended for by Senator Williams. Ship masters should be held to the honest exercise of all the vigilance they can employ to prevent smuggling. Surely that law is not oppressive which, when persons have imported goods contrary to law, lays upon them the burden of proving that they are not implicated in the wrong.

The Sentinel calls O'Meara "the editorial Titan of the Oregon Democracy." Descend from the imaginative to the practical, dear Sentinel, and call him the editorial Scapin of the Oregon Democracy, and you will describe him exactly.

Gold Shipments—Mexican Affairs.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Steamers took out for Europe to-day $937,000. Total shipments for the week $4,140,720. Four ship loads of Mormons have arrived here within a month past, and five more vessels with similar loads are now on their way to the United States.

The latest advices from Mexico state that Maximilian is far from preparing to evacuate his dominions and that on the contrary he has ordered a conscription for the Empire to take place on the 15th of July, which, with the aid of 60,000 francs per month from France, will be sufficient to keep him a while longer.

Conflict Between the Authorities at Charleston.

CHARLESTON, July 7.—General Sickles refused to comply with a writ of habeas corpus in favor of some prisoners at Castle Pinkney under sentence of death on the ground that the prisoners were convicted by a courtmartial of the murder of three soldiers, and the privileges of the writ are still suspended in South Carolina. Judge Bryan ordered an attachment to issue against Sickles for contempt of court made returnable on Tuesday.

An address by Gov. Orr favoring the Philadelphia Convention.

CHICAGO, July 8.—Gov. Orr, of South Carolina, has issued an address endorsing the proposed national Union convention at Philadelphia, and recommending that delegates be sent from South Carolina.

Proclamation to Reassemble Louisiana State Convention.

Judge R. H. Howell, President pro tem. of the Louisiana State Convention of two years ago, has issued a proclamation for its reassembling on the 30th of July, and he calls upon the Governor to issue writs of election to fill vacancies. The preamble expresses the purposes of the movement to be to revise and amend the organic law of the State in harmony with the general government, to establish impartial justice, insure domestic tranquillity secure the blessings of liberty to all alike, and restore the State to its proper and permanent position in the Union with ample guarantees against any further disturbances and also with a view to the ratification by the State of the proposed amendment of the constitution in the shortest time possible.

Foreign News.

NEW YORK, July 8.—Steamship Arizona arrived here this evening. She brings news to June 27th.

Consols closed at 86¾@86⅞ for money; five twenties 64@64½. Paris rentes closed 63 francs.

Earl Russell announced in House of Lords, and Mr. Gladstone in House of Commons on the 26th, that in consequence of the hostile vote the ministers had tendered their resignations, but the Queen having invited them to reconsider their determination, they awaited her arrival in London, and would have an interview with her next day.

The Italian army crossed the Mincio on the morning of June 24, near Goeto, and advanced slowly towards River bella, without meeting any resistance. At 2 o'clock the same day an Austrian brigade reached the outlying forts of Vero without loss, having been pushed back by a greatly superior force of Italian cavalry. The Italians, advancing on both sides of the Mincio towards Peschiera, were repulsed by a short cannonade from the outer fort of that stronghold.

A Verona dispatch of 2 P. M. Sunday says: A great battle has been in progress since morning between Italians and Austrians. Both wings of the Italian army have already been repulsed. The battle still continues.

Official dispatches from the Austrian headquarters state that the Italians were driven back across the Mincio, the Imperial army following. Our forces took several cannon and many prisoners, and behaved with extraordinary valor and endurance. The King employed in attack the 3d corps of the army of the Mincio and the reserve. Prince Amadus and many generals were wounded. The enemy appears to have all his troops in success dep under fire.

An official dispatch from the Italian headquarters, dated Sunday evening, says a desperate engagement had taken place in front of Verona, lasting almost the entire day. The first corps, which was intended to occupy the pavilions between Peschiera and Verona, did not succeed in the attack. The second and third army corps were unable to relieve the first corps from the assault, it had to sustain against the force of the enemy. The two latter corps are almost intact. An Austrian detachment occupied Stelalo Pass and descended from thence to Bormio in Lombardy, Sunday night. Garibaldi is near Lake Gorda. Judging from preparations on the lower Po, Cialdini will throw bridges across near Polesell.

The Moniteur says that the Italian volunteers who were at Como, have passed through Lecco on their way to the Tyrol. The Italian fleet left Taranto on the 21st. Two attempts were made by the Hanoverians to break through the Prussian line between Eisenbach and Gothea. A dispatch from Gothea, of June 25th, says that the Hanoverian commander had declared himself willing to capitulate to the Prussian troops, as the Hanoverian officers are personally convinced that the Hanoverian army is completely shut in by a superior number of Prussian troops. Later dispatches say that negotiations for capitulation remained without results, and that pending the truce, the Hanoverians have succeeded in reaching the territory of Meiningen, after having eluded the different Prussian corps by which they were surrounded.

PARIS, June 25.—The Moniteur says: The advance of the Prussians into Bohemia will have the effect of preventing Gen. Benedek from entering Silesia, that an engagement will shortly take place in Bohemia appears inevitable. The Grand Duke of Baden has broken off relations with Prussia. The movements of the Austrians, says a Berlin telegram, on the frontiers of Eastern Silesia are regarded as a feint. The main attack is expected further to the west.

CRACOW, Monday, June 25.—The town of Oswirin in Gallicia was attacked yesterday by a battalion of Prussian infantry and two divisions of cavalry, which retreated after a loss of eight killed and several wounded. No loss was incurred by the Austrians.

BERLIN, June 21.—The official Staats Anzeiger of today says: After the entry of the Prussians into the electorate of Hesse Cassel, the King of Prussia again made a fresh endeavor to come to an understanding with the electors. On the 22d, the Prussian Minister offered an alliance on the basis of the Prussian proposition for a new confederation, on condition that the electors should have a ministry which should guarantee the the treaty of 1841. Had this been accepted, the possession of his throne and his sovereign rights would have been guaranteed to him. The electors however declined the conditions without further hesitation. It was therefore necessary that measures should be adopted to connect the two positions of the kingdom of Prussia. The present military position of the Prussian Kingdom is a sure guarantee against the return of the former state of things. The Elector of Hesse has been sent to the north. The King of Prussia has placed the castles of Sterzing and Konigher at his disposal.

A telegram from Berlin of June 25th says: The Prussian Government intends to instruct its representatives abroad to declare that the circulation of false intelligence by Austrian authorities relative to the forcible enrollments by Prussians in Bohemia is a breach of international law, and their object is to prevent to the Austrian population the war which has broken out in the light of war of extermination against the inhabitants. Prussia has decided not to carry out in case of Hanover the measures allowed by the international law against the shipping of a hostile country, and has instructed the commanders of the Prussian men of war neither to blockade the Hanover ports nor seize private property at sea, with the exception of contraband of war belonging to Hanoverians. Brunswick has notified the Prussian Government of willingness to support the Prussian proposals for reform.

A dispatch from Berlin says it is officially announced that Prussian alliance has been accepted by all north German States, with the exception of Saxony, Hanover and Hesse-Nassau.

Many Hungarian deserters have come into the Prussian outposts with their horses and accoutrements, and a detachment has been formed of them at Glogin. Hungarian officers are expected to arrive in order to organize them.

The Mecklenburg and Oldenburg armies have been demoralized. They will form a reserve corps with other troops of northern Germany near Forgan.

STATE ITEMS.

In some portions of the State during the intensely hot weather of last week some of the young fruit was injured by being scorched. Apples exposed fairly to the sun were in some cases thoroughly cooked, as were also gooseberries and other partially grown fruit.

O'Meara announces that he has given the business charge of the Democrat to Messrs. Hill and Barnes. These gentlemen are printers, lately in O'Meara's employ. Jimmy commends them and says: "They have earned my gratitude." They had earned Jimmy's money and did not get it—and that's how they came to get the "business charge" of the paper.

We understand that Beriah Brown returned on the Oriflamme last night. We shall hear something more about the negro, now. Apropos: The Bulletin says: "The Portland Herald 'officially' announces that the irrepressible Beriah Brown has become its leading editor. It will take him less than six months to kill the concern. Setting aside his virulent Copperheadism, his interminable editorials are certain death to any paper."

The Copperheads are struggling desperately to regain political ascendancy. They clearly understand that the only way for them to succeed is, first, to get all the rebels enfranchised, and second, to give each of them two votes, or what comes to the same thing, let him vote for himself and for a disfranchised colored man. Hence Copperheads and rebels oppose the constitutional amendment which places all white men on equal footing as regards the exercise of political power.

Capt. John Cook, formerly one of the rebel Gen. Lee's staff, was arrested in Chicago for being the husband of two wives. He was held to answer.

The second Tuesday in October has been definitely fixed as the day for the trial of Jeff. Davis.

THE CURRENCY.—It will appear that the [illegible] Oregon [illegible] California has been commenced [illegible] from the Empire [illegible] upon us, both by [illegible] yesterday [illegible] about sixty with the [illegible] what was the [illegible] of [illegible] appears [illegible] think that [illegible] the presence of those low [illegible] and we are [illegible] the fact that the [illegible] fast superceding industri[illegible] White citizens will pay [illegible] well [illegible] society are literally obliged to stand back and watch the progress [illegible] Chinaman [illegible] cases that [illegible] Recently a very reliable firm on First street entered a complaint before Recorder [illegible] an intolerable nuisance caused by Chinamen in a building [illegible] After the matter had passed over the owner of the premises was very [illegible] What [illegible] can we expect than that [illegible] fair city [illegible] It is the duty of the Legislature [illegible] and it is hoped that [illegible]

A [illegible] SETTLERS.—A friend [illegible] eight miles from the [illegible] there is an island of beautiful prairie land there open for settlement. The region is noted for its superiority as a grazing country and in all respects is a very desirable place for the industrious farmer. Water, timber and [illegible] would be unable to make eight mile prairie [illegible] region, or [illegible] at a distance from the Columbia river the land cannot long remain with only a greatly enhanced value. We can see nothing whatever to interpose no objection to this region from the information given us by our friend and would recommend that those who are in search of homes make this prairie a visit. Quite a colony of industrious settlers could enjoy a degree of prosperity [illegible] rarely met with in new settlements, having a market almost at their very doors for all they could produce. We think the inducements are sufficiently strong to warrant a visit to the prairie by those who may wish to locate, when they can satisfy themselves.

RECORDER'S COURT.—J. J. HOFFMAN, J., Monday, July 9th, 1866. The following cases for violation of City Ordinances were disposed of: Jose Victoria, drunk, two days. John Welch, drunk, discharged. J. W. Wood, disturbing the peace, discharged. State vs [illegible] Wyatt, assault and battery committed upon J. W. Wood, defendant discharged. State vs Sam [illegible] and W[illegible], assault committed upon Charles Lawrence while doing duty catching a dog. Trial by jury and defendants found guilty. Each paid a fine of $5 and costs. Lee You, Chinaman, was on arrest for assaulting Sing Yan and discharged, the latter failing to appear against him was taxed to pay the costs of the proceeding. Henry Monger was sent to the county jail for three months, upon conviction for stealing a pair of blankets from the Union Hotel. John Flannigan was arraigned for taking a pair of pants belonging to another and his case was held under advisement.—[illegible] Dow, for taking a pair of blankets from the New Columbian Hotel, will be tried to-day.

IRON FRONTS.—We are pleased to observe that our home Iron Works are largely engaged at the present time in making castings for buildings. The use of iron as a building material has obtained a decided preference throughout the world and the amount annually consumed in this manner is now almost equal to the aggregate quantity of iron used a few years back for all purposes. The foundries of this city are able to produce as fine and substantial fronts as any foundries of the country, and it promises in future to become a leading feature of the business here. On Saturday we saw nearly a half block of ground covered with new fronts, lately cast at the Oregon Iron Works.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.—DEADY JUSTICE, Monday, July 9th, 1866. U. S. vs William Wilson. Indictment for passing forged checks. Until 3 o'clock in the afternoon the day was consumed in the formation of a jury, the hearing of the testimony, the argument of the [illegible] and the charge of the court. The jury retired at 3 o'clock P. M. and being unable to agree, at 10 o'clock they were discharged.

NEW ARRANGEMENT.—The mail steamers John H. Couch and Rescue of the O. S. N. Company's line, are now leaving this city for Astoria and Monticello under the new arrangement. The first will leave Portland on Mondays and Fridays of each week, at 6 o'clock A. M., returning, leave Astoria on Tuesdays and Saturdays. The Rescue will leave Portland on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, at 7 A. M., returning on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

THE NICOLSON PAVEMENT.—By to-morrow night the upper section of First street, from Ash to Madison, will be completed with the Nicolson Pavement. The lower section of Front street, from Ash to C, will next be finished, after which the draymen of the city will have cause to be very thankful, and their horses receive less injury, and in future there will be no more cause for complaint on account of bad streets.

MT. CRAWFORD CEMETERY.—We are pleased to learn that there is now some prospect that the long neglected [illegible]tery at East Portland will receive proper attention. It is proposed to extend the dimensions, so as to include thirty acres in the plat, and incorporate the same under some appropriate title on a capital stock of $5,100 in 51 shares of $100 each. Thirty-two shares of the stock have already been taken.

NEW MUSIC.—There is no more attractive place in the city than Messrs. Shanahan & Dufrene's picture gallery and music store. Especially is this so if one chances to meet with Prof. Grub there, or some other excellent pianist to strike the keys of one of those superb Bradbury instruments. A quantity of new music is always to be found at Shanahan & Dufrene's.

SEWER AUTHORIZED.—The Board of Commissioners for Multnomah county have authorized a survey and estimates for a sewer on Salmon street, for the purpose of draining the new Court House and property. The sewer will be built at the time the street is improved. Action was had previous to the writing of the item in yesterday's paper in regard to this matter.

LATEST PAPERS AND MAGAZINES.—McCormick, of the Franklin Book Store, has our thanks for the latest New York papers received on the coast. He returned by the Oriflamme last evening, with very full purchases of merchandise, as well as full files of late papers and magazines.

IS IT ECONOMY?—An item in our news summary this morning shows that sturgeon are used on Lake Erie as fuel. It is stated that twenty of these fish are equal to one cord of wood. That would be poor economy in this country with sturgeon at 4@5 cents per pound.

HOME MANUFACTURE.—Messrs. Higgins & Co., of the Portland Soap Factory, are now engaged in making and have on hand for sale a very superior stock of soap which they offer to the trade at San Francisco prices. See advertisement.

QUICK TIME.—The overland mail to arrive here to-day will bring dates from New York of June 11th and St. Louis June 14th. The same dates having been received overland at San Francisco on the evening of July 3d in advance of the steamer.

OUT TO HAND.—The missing numbers of Harper's Magazine for February and March 1866 have at last come to hand and can be obtained at Barrett's Book Store and News Depot.

A CURIOSITY.—Yesterday people were amused at seeing the street sprinkler at work in our city, while the driver held an umbrella over his head to shelter himself from the rain.

AT THE DOCK.—The steamship Fidelitier was brought up to her dock yesterday morning inside of twenty-four hours from the time Capt. Erskine left this city by the Oriflamme for Astoria.

PERSONAL.—Mr. D. Lehy arrived last evening to take the place of Mr. Ward as assistant to Dr. Plummer in the telegraph office at this city. Mr. Ward goes to Call[illegible].

HOME AGAIN.—Dr. J. C. Hawthorne, accompanied by Mrs. Hawthorne, returned by the steamship Oriflamme last evening.

LANGLEY'S PACIFIC COAST DIRECTORY.—A gentleman is now in Oregon collecting statistics and information for Langley's Pacific Coast Directory soon to be published.

Judge Sawyer to-day rendered judgment in favor of plaintiff for $14,150 [illegible]

Capt. [illegible] Humphrey of the ship H[illegible] Hart was examined to-day before U. S. Commissioner Sullivan [illegible] charge of having been guilty of the murder of Joseph Fernandez, a boy 14 years of age, on board of his ship when off Cape Horn. After the testimony for the prosecution had been taken, both the acting U. S. District Attorney and the Commissioner stated that they were satisfied that the Captain had not been guilty of any offense and the charge against him was dismissed.

Capt. Turner, of the [illegible] Pe[illegible], which recently arrived from the Northern cod fisheries with a cargo of [illegible] fish, reports having discovered new fishing grounds in the Aleutian [illegible] islands [illegible]

Thos. Byrnes, convicted of the murder of Chas. P. Hill in Santa Clara valley, on the 10th of February, 1865, was brought before Judge Pratt to-day for sentence [illegible] penalty [illegible] wonderfully since the conviction. He appears pale and haggard, as though the terrible anxiety regarding his appeals for executive clemency and the decision of the Supreme Court [illegible] The defiant air [illegible] the eight of his trial has disappeared, and to-day tears [illegible] for the first time since his arrest to have experienced a realization of the terrible position in which he is placed. When the court opened, Judge Pratt commanded the prisoner to stand up, which Byrnes complied with. He stood at the right of the Judge with his right hand resting upon a small desk, when Judge Pratt in an impressive manner addressed the prisoner and passed the sentence of death upon him. During the delivery of the address Byrnes kept his eyes constantly and firmly fixed upon the Judge, half anxious to hear all which escaped his lips. When the Judge spoke of his [illegible] father the tears gathered in the prisoner's eyes and his arm which was resting upon the desk shook like a leaf, but at no other time did he betray any symptoms of emotion. After sentence had been passed the prisoner was handcuffed and remanded back to jail, where he will remain until the time when he shall be taken out to make his exit from this to another world.

Shanghae dates are to May 5th. Rice and sugar were both lower. No other news of importance.

Money Matters—Mining Stocks.

Gold was quoted in New York on Saturday at 153⅝. The market for bullion and exchange for to-morrow's steamer presents some changes from the quotations given Saturday. Legal tenders are quoted by the brokers at 70 buying and 71 selling, with slow sales. Mining stocks are not so favorable to-day. Gould and Curry shows a decline of 55 from last public sales of that stock on the 1st inst. From Monday's Board to Saturday Yellow Jacket declined 25; Overman 12; Belcher 6; Bullion and Imperial each 3; Confidence [illegible] and Ophir 1.

Arrived—July 7th ship Carolina Read, 10 days from Port Orchard, with lumber; bark Mary, 6 days from Bellingham Bay with coal; bark Rival, 6 days from Port Discovery with lumber.

FROM THE NORTH.

VICTORIA, July 7.—The Russian American Trading Company's bark Prince Menschikoff from Sitka, ten days ago arrived this morning. She comes for a cargo of general merchandise. The Captain reports that none of the telegraph vessels were in port when he left, and that no news has been received from the telegraph expedition since last winter.

FROM IDAHO

We compile the following additional Idaho news from the Avalanche:

A letter from Red Mountains says: At the base of these mountains there are many thousands of acres of heavy washed boulders of marble and quartz. We found from seven to fifteen colors of fine gold to the pan from the surface to fourteen feet below the bed of the stream. We, in no instance, reached the bed rock. From the heavy wash we hope there is a large aggregation of gold on the bottom to find this we left four of our party. Those who came in with me returned yesterday with supplies—hopeful of finding an extensive deep and rich placer. There is an abundance of water and timber for the prosecution of their labors. We met a great many Shoshone Indians; they were friendly, acted as guides and herders for us. They expressed themselves anxious to join the whites in their conflicts with the hostile Indians.

W. B. Crane has an eastern party in tow trying to effect a sale of a south extension of the Morning Star ledge. Don't know what prospect there is of a dicker. If the sale is made there will be another mill brought to Owyhee soon thereafter.

FROM MEXICO.

The following is telegraphic news to the California papers:

IMPORTANT VICTORY OF THE REPUBLICANS

GALVESTON, July 2d.—The following important dispatch has been received at the headquarters of Gen. Wright, in this city, from General George W. Getty, commanding at Brownsville, dated the 25th of June:

"The right bank of the Rio Grande is now in possession of the Republican forces of Mexico. A battle took place between Escopedo and Mejia on the 16th near Camargo, which resulted in the total rout of the latter and capture of a train of merchandise.

BAGDAD AND MATAMORAS SURRENDERED

Bagdad was abandoned by the Imperialists on the night of the 18th. The city of Matamoros capitulated on the 23d, General Mejia, with the Imperial troops, embarking between the hours of three and four o'clock in the afternoon under the protection of the United States flag. Escopedo with his forces said to number 3,000 entered Matamoros about [illegible] June 24th.

There is a great oil excitement at Bothwell, Canada. The Rock River well is flowing at the rate of one hundred barrels a day and the Wont worth well twenty five barrels. Other companies have made large strikes. During the week ending May 20, 1,213 barrels of oil were shipped.

CATARRH.—THE ORIGIN OF CATARRH IS IN CASES [illegible] lected Cold, which can be relieved by the use of Brown's Bronchial Troches, by soothing the irritated and inflamed membrane extending from the nose to the throat. For Coughs and Throat Diseases the Troches are of great service.

$100 TO $50.—A CHALLENGE.—ELLSWORTH & CARDWELL, 89 First Street, make the following proposition: They will execute three dozen ENAMELED CARD PICTURES and three SUN PEARLS to be put into a package promiscuously with an equal number from any Gallery on the Pacific Coast (the name of the Artists not appearing upon either) and send the same to W. H. Rulofson, the Inventor, San Francisco, for his decision as to their merits. If he decides against the above firm they will pay any one who accepts their proposition $100; if in their favor the competing party shall pay them $50. The public already know where to get superior work. All kinds of Pictures taken as usual.

All Persons should test the merits of DR. HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. While it is highly palatable as a beverage, it is unequalled as a tonic and invigorator. In the pursuit of fortune at the mines, many persons are exposed to the attacks of complaints of the digestive organs, and of various kinds of fever. It is the very article that has so long been in demand at the mines. Its daily use will restore the tone of a deranged [illegible] impart fresh vitality to the digestive functions and cheer the spirits. Yet the Bitters is the safest of all stimulants. Let the miner who is exposed to heat and dry, wet and cold be certain to obtain a supply of the genuine Hostetter Bitters, and he will find it a certain safeguard to health. HOSTETTER'S

CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS

READ AND REFLECT

Make sure of Health. But how? you ask.
We answer, 'tis an easy task.
Strengthen the Stomach—the Mainstay—
The Nerves—the servants of the brain.
The Liver keep in proper play,
And regulate from day to day
Each organ old on Nature's plan,
Bind on a fresh the [illegible] MAN;
And like a watch that's kept in shine,
By constant care, with nature's time
The veal [illegible] and strength renew
And thereby cheer the spirits too.
If how you inquire can this be done,
This Victory o'er Disease be won,
HOSTETTER'S BITTERS we reply
Is HEALTH'S SUPREME INSTRUCTION—TRY.

As a means of regenerating the health of the enfeebled system, regulating every function of the internal organs, reviving the depressed spirits, invigorating the constitution, and prolonging life, no medicinal preparation either of the past or the present time, has been so completely and universally successful as

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS.

Against the vapors foul that rise
That fever taint the heavy air
Drink not unmixed the water foul
In prairies, woods or marshy ground
If sedentary toil you ply,
Nature you must assist—or die—
For when debarred from exercise
For artificial aid she cries
Medicine's grand purpose and intent
Is threatened evil to prevent
And if you'd be relieved or spared
From ills that crush the unprepared,
Hostetter's Bitters use—for note
They are the SUREST ANTIDOTE.

To set at defiance the miasma of unhealthy soils, the poison of unwholesome water, the effluvia of crowded work rooms and factories, and the baneful influence of sedentary employments, it is only necessary to be fore-armed with

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS.

Dyspepsia's pangs, that rack and grind
The body, and depress the mind
Agues, that as they go and come
Make life a constant martyrdom;
Colics and dysenteric pains
'Neath which the strong man's vigor wanes;
Bilious complaints, those tedious ills,
Ne'er conquered yet by drastic pills,
Dread diarrhoea that cannot be
Cured by destructive mercury;
Slow constitutional decay
That brings Death nearer, day by day;
Nervous prostration, mental gloom—
Heralds of madness or the tomb;
For these—though mineral nostrums fail—
Means of Relief at least we hail
HOSTETTER'S BITTERS—medicine sure,
Not to prevent, alone, but cure.

In dyspepsia, fever and ague, bilious complaints, constitutional and nervous debility, constipation, sea-sickness, spasms, and in all complaints of Man or Woman proceeding from casual or inherent weakness of the body the one great remedy and restorative is

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS.

To wanderers on sea or land,
From Polar shore to Tropic strand;
To households lone, in regions new,
And dwellers in great cities, too;
To soldiers in camp or tented field,
Who need against disease a shield;
To miners California bound,
And tillers of wet marshy ground,
To feeble wives of fragile mold,
To young and middle aged, and old,
To those in health who would enjoy
Heaven's best gifts without alloy;
To all the strengthless, weak and pale
Who droop, yet know not what they ail,
Hostetter's Bitters we present
As Health's most potent element.

If there is any value in public opinion or any weight in medical testimony, the very best and safest Tonic Corrective and Alterative now before the world is

A FRENCH "HANDY ANDY"

There died in Paris not many years ago, a singular character named Calino, of whose laughable blunders and eccentricities no end of stories used to circulate in the studios.

Calino was clerk to the well known picture dealer, Saurin, an employment which brought him much into contact with artists and literary men, to whom he was an endless source of amusement. Like other eccentricities he was, of course, liable to have attributed upon him sayings that he never had uttered, and blunders that he never had committed; but of the authenticated ones to which persons yet living are ready to testify I have selected a few, the recital will serve to show why I call him a French "Handy Andy."

One winter's day, as he walked with Saurin in the gardens of the Tuileries the latter, who was always fond on the windward of him, said:

"Calino, I'll bet you twenty francs that you don't walk across the frozen pond yonder on your bare feet." "Done!" cried Calino, and, taking off his shoes and stockings, he made tracks over the ice until he had got just half way across. Then he turned round, and saying it was too cold to go any further, made the best of his way back, thus losing his bet, though he had gone just the distance upon the ice that would have entitled him to win had he walked all the way over.

He was not always a very valuable salesman to M. Saurin, as the following anecdote will testify.

"What is the price of that picture? asked a connoisseur one day of Calino, who sat half asleep in Saurin's shop.

"Five thousand francs," replied Calino, and then went off into his doze again.

"And what is your opinion of it?" rejoined the connoisseur.

"My opinion of it," replied Calino, with a look of sagacious candor, "is that I wouldn't give two sous for it!"

One day he sent home from market a basket of provisions, with a note to his wife. A postscript to this epistle ran as follows. "You will find my letter at the bottom of the basket. If, by chance, you should fail to do so, let me know as soon as possible."

On one occasion, as Calino was exhibiting a knife that had belonged to some celebrated man, Fontallard, the painter, took it from him in joke, and, saying, "thank you," put it in his pocket.

"Come, now," said Calino, "if you don't give me back that knife I'll rip you up with it!"

He was passing an evening with Henri Murger, whose lodgings were on the sixth floor—as they often were, when he had any. About midnight he rose to go away, and Victor Dupre', the painter, gave him a lighted taper, that he might find his way down stairs without an accident He got to the bottom, all right, and then, remounting the stairs, knocked at Murger's door, saying—"Thanks for the taper; I've brought it back lest somebody else might want it."

There was an excursion party to Fontainebleau. Calino was one of the set, and, lodgings being scarce, they made themselves up for the night the best way they could. The only article that Calino could find for a pillow was a great stone jar, and on this he laid down his head very contentedly, when the hour for retiring had come.

"That must be rather a hard pillow," remarked one of his companions.

"Quite the reverse," said Calino; "I've stuffed it with hay."

Having to draw some interest due him from the Treasury, he passed the whole night at the doors, so as to be first in the line when morning came. When the wicket was opened and the receipt handed him for signature, poor Calino had actually forgotten his own name! Of course he was immediately jostled out of his place in the line. Tearing his hair, he rushed wildly home and rang the door bell His wife opened the door for him. "My name! my name?" shouted he, excitedly. "Calino, you fool!" replied his help-mate. "Right, by Jove, so it is!" said he, and back he sped to the Treasury, where he had to take his place at the end of the queue furthest from the pay-window.

Calino went out to fight a duel once with one of his companions. He was plucky enough. "You fire first," said he, placing himself sideways, so that his thin body presented a mark about as wide as the edge of a sheet of letter paper. His antagonist's bullet whistled harmlessly past him. "Now," exclaimed Calino, assuming an air of great magnanimity, "when I go out with a friend this is the way I settle the affair," and he raised his pistol, intending to discharging it in the air. Instead of this, however, he sent the ball through the arm of his grocer, who was his second on the occasion, and to whom, it was said, he was indebted to a considerable amount.

Roqueplan fell asleep in a carriage in which he was traveling in company with Calino. The latter shook him, saying:

"Wake up, there! We have got over so far on the road since you fell asleep."

"How far have we got?" inquired Roqueplan.

"About two leagues from here," replied Calino.

It was a shrewd saying of Calino's that "Providence had placed death at the end of life, in order to give people time to prepare for it."

"What capital oil that is!" said one of his friends, who was dining with him. "Where do you get it?"

"From Olive, direct," promptly replied Calino, who took the word on the label for the name of the place.

Mention was made of a man who had just died at the age of one hundred years. "That's nothing," remarked Calino; "if my grandfather were alive this day, he would be one hundred and fourteen years old."

To avoid some military duty, Calino once tried to get a certificate of defective sight from the surgeon of the regiment to which he belonged. "I am so near-sighted," said he, "that I can't see the stripes on the arm of that corporal over there."

He gave fifteen sous to a messenger to carry a letter for him. Then, turning to Meissonnier, the painter, he said: "Let me alone for doing a smart thing. I'm going to follow that chap all the way now to see that he delivers my letter right!"

Roger de Beauvoir sent Calino to buy some matches for him. They were good for nothing, and he was sent out again to look for some better ones. When he returned, de Beauvoir said: "Well, I hope the matches you have got this time were made to light." "That they were," replied Calino, "for I have tried every one of them."

Visiting Molir, at his Bellevue villa, he said to him—"What a splendid house you have got! Was it built in this country?"

Walking in the streets of Rouen one day, he observed that the clock of the Hotel de Ville was some minutes faster than his watch. "No wonder," said he, thoughtfully, "it is so much larger."

"Yesterday," said he, "I sat opposite a man in an omnibus, who looked so like one of my friends that he returned my salute when I bowed to him."

There is a letter of Calino's in existence, in which his natural tendency to blunder is happily illustrated. It runs as follows:

My Dear friend.—I left my knife at your lodgings yesterday; pray send it to me if you should find it. Yours, CALINO.

P.S.—Never mind sending the knife—I have found it.

During an excursion from Paris, he was struck by the beauty and grandeur of the Loire. "A very fine river, indeed," said he, "for a provincial one."

The mendacity of Calino has passed into a proverb among the Bohemiques of Paris, to whom he was an inexhaustible source of amusement and banter. One day he had a bit of news to tell, but, as usual, nobody would believe it. Presently came another of the set, however, who confirmed the intelligence, on which somebody remarked, "If it is true, then, how came we to hear it from Calino?"

Another time he had some very wonderful piece of information to impart "Not a word of it true," said one of the party, "for I have a letter of the 31st of last month which tells a very different story."

"But the letter I got it by is dated the 22d," said Calino.

One evening Calino entered a cafe where a number of artists were assembled Before he had time to open his mouth, Gavarni pointed at him and said:

"That's a fib!"

"Why, I haven't told you anything!" exclaimed Calino.

"No," rejoined Gavarni, "but you are going to, and it will be a fib!"

Calino was very subject to absence of mind, during fits of which he used to make the most amusing blunders One day, calling to see Gaillard, he entered the house with a small piece of mat, taken from a kitchen sink, under his arm. He had mistaken it for his straw hat, which he as often carried in that position as on his head. Another time, to the great amusement of the gamins, he appeared in the street with his coat turned inside out, and would have worn it so all day, probably, had not Musard met him, and informed him of his mistake.

Of the many practical jokes played upon Calino by his companions the following is an example:

He had supped with two of his friends, and in the course of the evening the three engaged in a game of dice, during which luck ran against Calino. Every time he lost, he used to rip out an oath of the most awful and ingenious conception, and when all his money was gone, he threw himself upon a sofa where he was to pass the night, and went to sleep, swearing to the very last. Before he was quite asleep, though, his companions, who continued their game, recommended him, with well feigned concern, to ask pardon of Heaven for the terrible words uttered by him. "Otherwise," said they, "some great token of the displeasure of Providence will be sure to fall upon you." But Calino only ripped out another oath, stronger, if possible, than any of his previous ones, and soon after he was heard snoring, in a heavy sleep.

By and by his two companions bethought them of playing a trick upon him. Extinguishing the candles and the fire, and closing the shutters, so that not a ray of light from without could find its way into the apartment, they pretended to dispute over a throw of the dice, lifting their voices to such a pitch as to waken Calino, who raised himself to a sitting posture, and finding all dark, asked them how they came to play without a light.

"Get out, you dolt, you're only half awake!" said one of the players, and they went on with pretended game, taking no further notice of Calino, who again subsided into a half doze. Presently they got up another simulated dispute about a point in the game, and, wakening Calino, called upon him to decide the matter.

"How can I tell anything about it when it's pitch dark?" said Calino, in a drowsy voice.

"Rub your eyes, sleepy-head," said one of the jokers.

Calino rubbed his eyes, and then said, "It's no use. I can't see in the dark."

With well feigned astonishment the two jokers now exchanged expressions of surprise and concern with each other. "Bring the candle closer," said one of them, and the unlighted candle was held within a few inches of Calino's nose.

"Don't you see the light, now?" asked the one who held it.

"Not a blink of light, so help me!" exclaimed Calino.

"Good gracious!" cried one of the jokers, "he has gone stone-blind. Heaven has inflicted this awful calamity on him, as a punishment for the blasphemies uttered by him last night!"

"Blind! blind!" shrieked Calino, in an agony of terror and remorse. "Pity the poor blind!" continued he, as the supplications of some sightless mendicant of the highways recurred to him. "Oh! I have been a wicked man! Restore me the sight of but one eye, and I will never tell another falsehood or swear another oath!"

And thus he went on, lamenting, and making the most extraordinary confessions and pledges of repentance, while his two companions did all in their power to console him. Force of imagination does wonders, and by and by poor Calino fancied that his eyes were giving him great pain, upon which one of his tormentors, who was a medical student, bandaged them with a silk handkerchief, and then administered a light opiate to the patient, which presently put him to sleep.

It was broad daylight when Calino awoke, and tearing the bandage from his eyes, uttered an exclamation of joy. For some time he could not be persuaded but that his experience of the night was only a terrible dream. But when his companions recounted to him all that had taken place, he was constrained to believe that he really had been struck blind. They told him that his recovery could have been wrought in no other way than by a miracle, the medical gentlemen took some of the credit of it to himself, on the score of the dose administered by him to the patient.

Calino was very subdued and circumspect in conduct for a long time after this, and he never knew, to the day of his death, that a practical joke had been played upon him, but frequently complained that he had never fully recovered his original power of eye-sight.

Reminiscences of a Dinner with Charles Dickens.

I noticed a few days since, in the Evening Post, a letter from Charles Dickens, copied from a London journal, touching an artist named Seymour, and his alleged connection with the Pickwick Papers, a connection which, Mr. Dickens says, was suggested, "or asserted, "in some incoherent observations" made by the widow of the said Mr. Seymour, soon after his death, which event occurred before twenty-four pages of the Pickwick Papers had been written. Mr. Dickens adds, that he never saw Mr. Seymour's handwriting in his life, and "never saw him but once, and that was within forty-eight hours of his untimely death." In short, Mr. Dickens avers that "Mr. Seymour, the artist, never originated, suggested, or in any way had to do with, save as an illustrator of what I devised, an incident or character, (except the sporting tastes of Mr. Winkle,) a name, phrase, or word to be found in the Pickwick Papers."

In addition to this alleged "partnership of authorship," Mr. Dickens at the time wrote to his first publisher, Mr. Chapman, who responded immediately:

"He reminded me," says Mr. Dickens, "that I had given Mr. Seymour more credit than was his due." "As this letter is to be historical," he wrote, "I may as well claim what little belongs to me in the matter, and that is, the figure of Pickwick. Seymour's first sketch, made from the proof of the first chapter, was of a long, thin man. The present immortal one he made from my description of a friend of mine at Richmond."

I now understand—and that is the point I am trying to get at—what has always been to me a mystery.

Soon after Mr. Dickens' arrival in this country, (to which, his American Notes to the contrary, notwithstanding, I wish he would come again and give us a course of his popular "Readings,") I had the honor to entertain him at dinner, with other literary and legal gentlemen and artists, whom he was delighted to meet, as they were to honor him by their presence.

Among the guests was an old friend, whom we used to designate, among his intimates, as "Pickwick." S. O. D., whose first name was Samuel, was of same the noble nature as his immortal prototype, and was almost the express counterpart of his person. He had a goodly periphery; his limbs seemed to have been melted and run into his lower habiliments; his mild gray eyes beamed through his golden glasses, and all his features radiated benevolence and good feeling; insomuch that I could not help asking Mr Dickens if my friend did not remind him of his world-renowned creation.

To my great suprise, he answered: "Somewhat, but not nearly so much as an elderly gentleman whom I had the pleasure to meet the day before yesterday at dinner; one of the most benignant, kindly-featured faces I scarcely remember to have met—in this country, at least His manner, dignified and stately, was yet so simple and unaffected as a child. He is, I was told, an eminent lawyer of your city—George Griffin by name."

Can you think of any person more unlike your previous conception of Pickwick than the late George Griffin? Thin as a lath, extremely tall, and as was thought by most persons, not a little awkward and ungainly, he seems the very reverse, in every point of view, of the great author of the Tittlebat Theory.

But I can see now that the "long, thin man," first suggested to Dickens's imagination, was in his mind at the time, and at that early day he was scarcely able to dissociate Pickwick from his "first impression." I could hardly help thinking, for a long time, that a sly joke was intended; but it struck many of the guests at the table as a veritable idiosyncrasy.

* * *

It makes me sad to night, as I sit in my little sanctum, listening to the solemn-sounding billows of the Tappan-Zee breaking upon its adjacent western shores—it makes me sad, I say, to connect with the pleasant dinner to which I have referred the thought, "How many friends who graced that memorable occasion with their presence 24 years ago, have gone hence to be no more seen." Washington Irving, whom I never saw more genial, even at his own hospitable board, "sleeps his last sleep" on the east bank of the Hudson, opposite our humble dwelling Henry Brevoort, a scholar, a true gentleman and his life-long friend, is with him in the "spirit land" the accomplished and good Bishop Wainwright has followed them thither, and soon after Henry Cary, the refined and elegant writer, and most hospitable friend from the classic soil of Italy, ascended to bear them company. Henry Inman, the artist who has adorned the galleries of Europe and America with portraits which will live as long as the canvas upon which they are painted shall endure—he too has gone; and David Graham, the most eloquent and prominent member of the New York bar, and our dear friend "Pickwick" all are gone!

Thank Heaven that others of our friends, who honored that ever remembered dinner with their presence, are still among us; healthful and serene in years, with eye undimmed and natural strength unabated. Fitz Greene Halleck and William Cullen Bryant still live, and long may they live to delight and instruct the world with the fruit of their genius L. GAYLORD CLARK.

THE NORTHERN TELEGRAPH.—The Cariboo Sentinel of July 2d, says:

The telegraph line is now completed to Fraser Lake, 100 miles, and the chopping party are some way ahead The work is being pushed on vigorously, and it is expected the line will be stretched to Rocher de Boullier, on the Skeena River, by the first of August. Parties are exploring the Skeena river, and it is hoped the Stekin can be crossed a short distance from the coast. Over 250 pack animals are employed transporting wire and supplies. About 100 pack animals and the same number of beef cattle leave here to-morrow for Fraser Lake. The boats have already made two trips to Fort Fraser and Nakeesla.

Terrible Adventure in a Russian Forest.

A gentleman engaged in collecting natural curiosities met with a terrible adventure a short time ago, while traveling near the river Dnieper, in Russia. We will let him speak for himself.

After I had gathered innumerable objects of interest to naturalists, and after having enjoyed the pleasure of hunting game of many kinds, I found myself one afternoon on a peninsula, densely wooded and surrounded by the majestic river Dnieper. The time passed rapidly without bringing satiety, I felt perfectly happy Suddenly I noticed a change all around me The birds came flying from the south in great numbers and betrayed in their flight unusual haste and excitement I turned around, and then I observed along the entire horizon dense dark masses of smoke at the same time I perceived that the dark sky was reddened here and there. A distinct, smoky smell filled the atmosphere. There remained no doubt now in my mind as to the cause of all this the peasants had fired the forest! The law punishes this crime with banishment to Siberia of course when the criminal is detected The inhabitants of this part of Russia like to set fire to the woods in the beginning of spring, for the swampy forest thickets are the favorite resting-places of wolves, which congregate there in great numbers At a fire in the woods, many of the beasts come to their end, and the rest find safety in flight

My situation was very dangerous now, for the only road leading to the open plain was cut off, from that road an ocean of flame was driven by the wind directly toward me and came with every moment nearer and nearer. Bright flames appeared already here and there, and at the same time loud howling was heard A thousand terrified animals filled the air with their cries I knew the fate which awaited me, and the beasts of prey would be forced by the fire all around them to fly to the peninsula where I was, and I surrounded by wolves, would have the choice either to fall a prey to their voracity, or be drowned in the water, if my faithful fisherman with his boat, should not appear in time.

Without losing a moment, I ran toward the spot on the shore where my boat was to wait for me, and it was time, for I plainly heard the wolves howling behind me, and observed on looking back, how four of the beasts ran through the trees a few paces to my right. Among the birds of the forest there began a general uproar all kinds of sounds rose on all sides, voices cried, trumpeted, whistled and grunted all together Smoke and flame came nearer and nearer. The reeds on the peninsula where I stood were already on fire, the dry grass burned with a rattling sound, and sparks flew high up into the air like rockets, while the cinders fell round about me to the ground. It was like a piece of wild hunting from the Freyschutz, only more magnificent and —a little more dangerous to the spectator I had involuntarily cocked my gun, for every now and then a flying wolf would rustle past me through the bushes I had now penetrated to the utmost end of the peninsula, and saw that the opposite shore was likewise enveloped in bright masses of flame. The peasants had, systematically, laid fire to the woods on both sides in order to cut off the retreat of the wolves As far as I could see there was dense smoke, mountains on fire, flying ducks, wild geese, cranes, despairing pelicans, swans, and howling wolves, furious from fear, who moved from one thicket to another until at last, forced by the flames and biting smoke, they made a desperate leap into the water But here they only encountered their fellow-sufferers, who swam toward them from the opposite shore, then four all ablaze. None of the flying animals threatened to attack me, fear seemed to have spoiled their appetite.

But the fire approached me with great velocity a few minutes longer and I should have been obliged to leap into the water myself I observed the quick approach of the horrible ocean of flames with a dead-like fear. A pyramid of fire rose up in my immediate neighborhood, and at the same moment five wolves ran directly toward me, their mouths wide open and their eyes wild with terror. An almost involuntary pressure of my fore finger on my gun, and the foremost wolf had the entire load in his head; he fell backwards to the ground, while his followers leaped into the water, terrifying the pelicans, ducks and swans, which were helplessly congregated there.

But in answer to my shot I now heard the rough voice of my fisherman. His hoarse "Halloo, there," sounded like music in my ears. Another second and I stood in the boat, saved.

Immediately behind us the last remaining reeds burned noiselessly down, and the licking tongues of fire drove the last animal into its watery grave. Every living thing which could neither swim nor fly was inevitably lost.

HOW LEACHES ARE BRED.—There is a curious branch of industry followed by certain inhabitants of the great marsh lands in the neighborhood of Bordeaux, France.

Some years ago a farmer of the district observed that the leeches native to those marshes attained to a great size in the places where many cattle were turned out to pasture, and, more particularly, where horses formed the principal stock This suggested to him the idea of making leech culture a specialty. He had some small capital, and this he was shrewd enough to turn to the best advantage. In the first place he rented a tract of marsh, which he divided off into square ponds, surrounded with railings. The water in these ponds is about fifteen inches deep, and the mud at the bottom of them afford winter quarters for myriads of leeches, which, when the warm sun of spring arouses them from their winter lethargy, come up to the surface very lively, and anxious for a gorge upon their natural aliment, blood.

To supply this, the leech cultivator invested a portion of his capital in a drove of old horses, which were bought up by him at an average price of about twelve francs per head. No sooner were these wretched victims driven into the ponds than they were fastened upon by the leeches, whose voracious instincts were aroused the moment the water became agitated Instances are not unfrequent of horses becoming so exhausted by these insatiable blood-suckers as to sink down into the water, where they are sometimes suffocated before assistance can come to hand.

The process of catching the leeches is a very simple one. It is mostly carried on by young girls and lads, who, during the summer season, enter the ponds, wearing long, waterproof boots of thick leather, and furnished, each of them, with a sort of camp-stool and a canvas bag. Seating themselves in the ponds, they disturb the water with their feet, and immediately the leeches, imagining that horses have plunged into the ponds, swarm around the leech fishers and fasten greedily upon their boots. Selecting the best-grown leeches, the fishers now pick them off, and put them into their bags, and in this way many thousands are taken by them in the course of a few hours. The leeches are then carried home, and, having been culled and sorted according to size, are placed in tubs filled with soft, moist clay, into which they immediately burrow The tubs are then tightly covered with strong, porous canvas, and in this state the leeches are taken to market.

ADMIRAL DENMAN AND THE VALPARAISO BOMBARDMENT.—The London Spectator, discussing the Valparaiso affair and the recent debate in Parliament, makes the following pungent observations:

A great many wild assertions were made in the debate, but the dispatch of the American Commodore has been published, and he affirms distinctly that had Admiral Denman consented to aid him, they would have decided to lay their ships between the Spanish Admiral and the town. If they had been laid, we do not think a single shot would have been fired. Spain might have declared war. Spain might have appealed to Europe against maritime tyranny after a fashion which would have been diplomatically most unpleasant But there is no Admiral of any state, or combination of states, who, without orders specifically addressed to that special contingency, would fire into a combined English and American squadron, for this very simple reason There is on earth no state, and no possible combination of states, whose marine would be in existence three months after the Anglo Saxon federation had resolved that it should cease to exist. The alliance of England and America is the one alliance which the maritime world is incompetent to resist, and we do not believe, let Layard make any assertion he pleases, that the Spanish Admiral, specially chosen because he is not a nonentity, would have run a risk so unmistakably great for a gratification so infinitesimal. Husseys the Spaniards could have destroyed the combined squadrons. Grant it, though Commodore Rodgers distinctly refutes him, and how many days would have elapsed ere San Francisco would have witnessed the sale of the Spanish fleet by auction to the highest bidder, the person obtaining a title which earth combined could not have interfered with? Admiral Denman knew well that he could prevent a terrible outrage against civilization by a mere consent, and had to overcome temptation of all others the most effective with a British Admiral. It would have been a proud moment for him, a moment such as rarely occurs in a man's life, when his flag rose between an armed fleet and its victims, a powerful barrier through which no power on earth dare break, when his bare fiat could protect a State, when his risk of his own commission could preserve a great community with which he was personally acquainted from the horrors of the worst form of war.

TO THE UNFORTUNATE,
NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES
Dr Gibbon's Dispensary,

617 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases such as Gonorrhea, Gleet Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing,) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgence, or from virus absorbed into the system. Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken-down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible life-destroying maladies—see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, a physician who has made private disease his especial study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate cases without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of these charlatans

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practised by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing, with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, a disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, feted breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity If relief be not obtained, should apply immediately, either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr. G. will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to each patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Doctor Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded, free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions for use, for Ten Dollars, sent in registered letter or through Wells, Fargo & Co.

DR. CHAS. H. TOZER'S
PRIVATE MEDICAL INSTITUTE,
N. E. Cor. Jackson and Kearney Sts.,
SAN FRANCISCO.

THE GREAT ERADICATOR OF SPECIAL COMPLAINTS, FORMERLY OF LOCK HOSPITAL, LONDON, EIGHT YEARS [illegible], AND THE LAST [illegible] YEARS IN SAN FRANCISCO.

DR. TOZER'S

Experience is of forty years [illegible], and during that time has met with unparalleled [illegible] treatment of all those diseases generally kn[illegible]

Venereal or Ch[illegible]

It is impossible here to [illegible] diseases with which he is familiar; some, [illegible] to be only of place. The most formidable [illegible] destructive to mankind is Self-Abuse. The [illegible] seal of the disease the whole system [illegible] here enumerate some of th[illegible] that those afflicted may be able to form [illegible] complaints, and seek advice [illegible] themselves a world of suffering [illegible] of Memory, Pain in the Limbs [illegible] the Heart, Trembling of the [illegible] Aversion to Genial Society, [illegible] There are a great many more, but [illegible] and should you be suffering from [illegible] DR. TOZER, and he will cure you in [illegible] out any interruption in your business—or state by letter, and there will be no occasion for your calling at the office.

Stricture of the Urethra

Is another formidable enemy to health. Send for one of my circulars on that disease, and inform yourself of the terrible results. The worst cases cured in a few days.

Venereal Diseases

In all their various forms, either Primary, [illegible] or Hereditary, completely eradicated from the system. Your constitution being restored to perfect health, there will be no danger of handing down to your children that horrible disease known as Scrofula.

Syphilitic Disease

As it presents itself on this coast, is of a [illegible] character than that seen in the Atlantic States [illegible] arising from the fact of its being a compound of Chinese and Sandwich Island disease. Those of you who have visited the two latter countries no doubt have seen the dreadful effects of it on both the native and foreign population. It requires altogether different mode of treatment.

The Old Formulas

Of Ricord, Acton and Bostwick are of little use except to dry up the disease on the surface, leaving the poison in the blood, which, sooner or later, will show itself as a secondary disease in an aggravated form. Such facts I have learned by experience, and think that I can say without boasting that I have seen more practice in these diseases than any other physician in the State, dating as it does from 1849. It becomes you, therefore, to think well, before you employ a physician.

Who is the proper one to consult—an old experienced one or one who has recently settled amongst you?

My Plan is Purely Vegetable,

Destroying the disease and purifying the blood, so that there is no danger of secondary symptoms.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia,

And diseases arising from the use of Mercury, such as pains in the skin-bones, swelling of the different joints of the body, running sores, etc., etc., and impurities of the blood, cured in a short time by the use of my VEGETABLE MIXTURES, known only to myself.

Diseases Peculiar to Females,

Such as Retention, Painful Menstruation, etc., etc., have been my study for a great number of years, and I can safely promise a perfect cure in a short time.

Do not be deterred from calling on Dr. TOZER from delicacy or a fear of exposure, as the Doctor is a man in whom you can trust, and all cases are treated with the utmost secrecy.

My Female Pills

Are the best ever used in this climate for the Suppression of the Monthly Sickness. Every lady should have a box in case of necessity. Price, $5. Consultation, at the office or by letter, FREE. All letters returned or destroyed. Office hours from 9 A. M. till 8 P. M.
